What is the Margin Requirement?

The Margin Requirement is the amount of funds needed to open a new position. It is determined by your account’s leverage and the margin settings of each trading instrument. Margin requirements are set per symbol and automatically adjust when the net number of open lots increases or decreases.

For currency pairs, the margin is calculated as a percentage of the notional value of the trade. If your account base currency differs from the margin currency, the required margin is converted using the appropriate exchange rate.

Please note that extreme market conditions or event-related risks may require the Company to update margin requirements without prior notice.
